Market Commentary

As expected, the ABS market was typically quiet during August, and that, combined with a fairly benign ongoing backdrop and less speculation around monetary policy, maintained a positive tone to ABS markets and a modest tightening in spreads in general against a strong supply-demand technical.

RMBS/ABS

Primary issuance was low for the most part, although two UK RMBS deals were pre-placed into the market in the final week of the month, the more notable deal being a prime UK RMBS STS deal from Santander under their popular Holmes platform. There has been a notable and expected increase in prime UK RMBS issuance this year, which has been well received by investors in anticipation of TFSME repayments by financial institutions. In line with several other recent prime deals, the Holmes deal was upsized, in this case from £500m to £750m, leading to a small tightening in issue spread to $+54 for this slightly longer deal, and a final oversubscription level of 1.5x. The largest investor type for these deals continues to be bank treasuries, but they are also seeing healthy demand from asset managers. Participation from European investors remains patchy, with most demand unsurprisingly from the UK.

CLO

The CLO market, in contrast, had quite a busy month of primary issuance in August, with four deals pricing in the final two weeks of the month, to leave year-to-date issuance at €16bn, which is just 11% lower than the same period last year. The tone for issuance has markedly improved over the course of the last few weeks and primary AAA bonds are now in the +170 basis points (bps) to +175bps spread context, although KKR managed to print a static deal at +160bps. BBB and BB primary bonds are now getting placed sub +500bps and +800bps respectively. This would all suggest that the summer spread tightening could have further to go, predicated on a potential heavy pipeline of primary together with a potential increase in refinancings, when the non-call period of CLOs issued last year expires. Furthermore, the late summer surge of activity led to another jump in secondary loan prices, which will continue to maintain pressure on the arbitrage metrics, with the European Leveraged loan index moving up to 96.48% of par versus 95.20% at the beginning of the month. The weighted average cost of capital is now in the region of 257bps, around 20bps tighter versus June.

Secondary markets

Secondary volumes were generally busier than normal during August, but bonds were well absorbed and spreads were generally rangebound with some modest tightening in certain sectors. BWIC volume in RMBS/ABS was around 300m (EUR 100m and GBP 200m) versus 500m seen in July, split 60%, 30% and 10% across senior, investment grade (IG) mezzanine and sub-IG respectively. Yieldier senior bonds like Dutch BTL were around 5-10bps tighter to ~75bps of spread, and UK NC/BTL were around 10bps tighter too. There remains a lot of appetite for mezzanine IG RMBS and ABS, and spreads were 5-15bps tighter over the month for good quality names, although they still lagged broader credit markets a little. In the CLO space, most of the secondary bonds traded were skewed to the senior side and flows were elevated overall for the time of year. The tone was broadly positive in this space too with dealers actively providing liquidity on BWICs.

Portfolio Commentary

August was a reasonably busy month for the portfolio managers. The Fund added new issue prime AAA RMBS STS bonds from Santander's UK Holmes shelf, together with several other add-ons from recently issued prime deals. These are generally yielding around 5.75% for 3.5-year maturities. Further investments were made in relatively short-dated 1.5-year Auto AAAs as the team considered them to be offering an attractive yield at very tight bid-offer spreads. These investments increased the liquidity allocation during a very slow month following inflows into the Fund and are likely to be relatively shorter hold assets that the portfolio managers intend to rotate into an active primary market in September. The PMs still see good relative value in AAA CLOs in DMs in the region of EUR+170bps, which equates to EUR yields of around 5%. Several additions were made in secondary deals from preferred managers in this pricing context. The strong technical remains in the market, which the PMs believe should help underpin spreads in the near term. Secondary flows were quieter over the month and liquidity was robust.

The Fund returned 0.73% (Class I Acc Gross) for the month with three-year volatility at 2.60%.

Market Outlook and Strategy

While August proved to be a typically quiet month overall from a primary perspective, secondary markets were generally more active in both ABS and CLOs. The market technical remains strong and there is clearly a lot of investor demand across asset classes in all parts of the capital stack. It is expected that the primary supply in September will be strong, but the market looks to be well positioned to absorb this, and spreads are likely to be stable in the near term as a consequence, depending on investor demand.
