Market Commentary

December was a strong month for markets, as sentiment on the Omicron Covid-19 variant improved and markets digested the hawkish pivots taken by central banks. As a result, the S&P finished the month up by 4.4%, whilst the EuroStoxx50 was up by 5.8% in December. In credit, the iTraxxXover index was 46bp tighter by the end of the month at 242 bp.

Market participants were comforted by early data on the Omicron variant that suggested it was less severe than previous strains. Furthermore, the results from initial studies on the efficacy of existing vaccines were encouraging. For example, the research showed three doses of Pfizer to be 75.5% effective against any symptomatic disease, and at the same time, two doses still offered 70% protection against hospitalisations. This positive news overshadowed the introduction of some restrictions in the developed world, which mainly concentrated on international travel and the unvaccinated.

The Fed's Open Market Committee (FOMC) took a hawkish tilt in their December meeting, announcing that they would double the pace of tapering to $30bn a month, meaning it would end QE in March 2022. The new dot plots indicated three rate hikes in 2022, with an additional three in 2023 and two in 2024, representing a significant shift from the previous dot plots from September. Powell also officially dropped the term transitory with regards to inflation. The market processed this shift well, largely because it was extremely well flagged by Powell and a range of committee members in the weeks preceding the meeting.

The Bank of England (BoE) on the margin surprised the market with a 15bp hike to 0.25% - the Monetary Policy Committee acted due to the labour market appearing 'very tight' and forecasting inflation to peak at 'around 6%' in 2022, an increase from their prior level of 5.1%. The small nature of the hike and the fact that participants expected the BoE to hike back in November resulted in muted market reaction. The ECB on the same day announced that it would be ending net purchases of PEPP in March 2022, while transitioning to an increased APP of €40bn a month in Q2 2022, €30bn in Q3, and then to €20bn a month from October. Overall, the market viewed the European developments as a fairly neutral outcome.

In terms of data, the headline US CPI number release of 6.8% was the highest reading since 1982, and a strong household employment report resulted in the unemployment rate falling to 4.2%. The 10-year US Treasury yield finished the month 7bp higher at 1.51% - though perhaps this yield would have been higher if not for the technical factors affecting the year-end.

Portfolio Commentary

Primary issuance slowed in December, as is usually the case, but especially this year due to the supply already seen in 2021 and the uncertainty derived from the Omicron variant. Sector allocations were unchanged. However, the team took the opportunity to look for relative value switches to optimise the portfolio.

It was a strong month for risk assets as positive returns were evident across the spectrum. The US high yield and COCO indices outperformed (+1.88% and +1.36%, respectively). European high yield, Sterling high yield and emerging markets were also up (+0.88%, +0.66% and +0.54%, respectively). Conversely, risk-off assets produced negative returns due to improved Omicron sentiment, largely reversing the moves of the month before; UK Gilts underperformed the most returning -2.80%, with European Governments and US Treasuries also posting negative returns (-1.45% and -0.57%, respectively).

Against that backdrop, the fund posted returns of 0.75% for December.

Market Outlook and Strategy

The market will still be following the data from the Omicron variant to assess its impact and see whether current restrictions will be sufficient. Furthermore, upcoming US inflation and employment data could prove critical before the next FOMC meeting, where we may see language from Powell, which indicates a March hike. Meanwhile, markets have priced in a 25bp hike for the BoE meeting in early February in the UK. The team will closely follow data and Central Bank comments to assess the likely path of upcoming hiking cycles.

The team expect strong at the beginning of 2022 as companies look to issue before an environment of rising rates. The team will selectively participate in the primary market, where they can find attractive deals. The Portfolio Managers will also look to take advantage of any volatility to add to their favoured names.

Key Risks

- All financial investment involves risk. The value of your investment isn't guaranteed, and its value and income will rise and fall. Investors may not get back the full amount invested.
- Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance, and the Fund may not achieve its investment objective.
- Fixed income carries two main risks, interest rate risk and credit risk: (1) Where long term interest rates rise, there is a corresponding decline in the market value of bonds and vice versa; (2) Credit risk refers to the possibility that the issuer of the bond will not be able to repay the principal and make interest payments.
- Typically, sub-investment grade securities will have a higher risk of issuer default, and are generally considered to be more illiquid than investment grade securities.
- The Fund can invest in structured credit products or asset-backed securities (ABS). The issuer of such products may not receive the full amounts owed to them by underlying borrowers, which would affect the performance of the Fund. Credit and prepayment risks also vary by tranche which may affect the Fund's performance.
- The Fund has the ability to use derivatives, including but not limited to FX forwards, for hedging only (EPM). This may magnify gains or losses.
- Investments in emerging markets may be affected by political developments, currency fluctuations, illiquidity and volatility.
