Market Commentary

The month of March was dominated by key central bank meetings and market participants dissecting every economic data point to anticipate when central banks would start their easing cycles. The overall risk sentiment was supported by the market's view that the start of the easing cycle for the Federal Reserve (Fed) was only a few months away.

The European Central Bank (ECB) was the first of the major central banks to hold its meeting in March. While the main rate was left unchanged, officials struck a dovish tone and revised their inflation forecast downwards. Core inflation is now expected to be 2.6% this year, 2.1% in 2025 and 2.0% in 2026; therefore, ECB officials are pointing to core inflation rates being back at their target rate in the near future. The near-term growth forecast was also revised down to 0.6%. Overall, the market started to increase the probability that the ECB could be first of the key central banks to start its cutting cycle. Over the month, the market pricing of a cut for the ECB's June meeting increased.

In the US, March was a heavy month for data releases. First, the jobs report depicted a more nuanced environment; while the non-farm payroll report showed continued strength in the economy (275k versus 200k expected), the unemployment rate rose to 3.9% (its highest level since December 2021) and average hourly earnings slowed to +0.1% (versus +0.2% expected). Subsequently, the US Consumer Price Index (CPI) report indicated that inflation remained sticky: headline CPI came in at a six-month high of +0.44% month-on-month, and core CPI was at +0.36%, which also meant that annual core CPI was above expectations at +3.8% (versus +3.7% expected). This was further confirmed by the Producer Price Index (PPI) as headline numbers came in at +0.6% (versus +0.3% expected).

Despite the stronger readings for inflation, the Fed meeting still struck a slightly dovish tone. They made no changes to the base rate, and the revised dot plots showed that the median dot for 2024 was unchanged, with three cuts for the year expected. The Fed's economic projections were revised higher, with real GDP growth revised up from 1.4% to 2.1%, core Personal Consumption Expenditures (PCE) inflation up to 2.6%, and unemployment revised lower to 4.0%. February core PCE deflator which was published at the end of the month was more supportive however (+0.26% versus +0.3% expected); and although it remained somewhat elevated, it eased considerably after the +0.45% January print. In the face of the mixed data, market pricing for a Fed cut in June was lower over the month.

The Bank of Japan also held an important meeting where it lifted its key short-term interest rate from -0.1% to a range of 0% to 0.1%, its first hike since 2007. Despite a set of measures making monetary policy more restrictive, the tone remained dovish, which led to the yen making a 34-year low against the US dollar towards the end of the month.

The positive risk sentiment was broad based with equity indices making new highs and credit spreads tightening, with European and US high yield spreads down to their lowest since January 2022. In rates, price action was mixed over the month but generally yields finished tighter; the 10-year German bund yield finished the month 11 basis points (bps) lower, the 10-year US Treasury yield declined by 5 bps, and the 10-year UK gilt yield was 19 bps lower.

Portfolio Commentary

Markets remained liquid with continued primary activity. Despite a month filled with central bank meetings, investment grade (IG) issuance remained elevated ahead of Easter. The primary market was met with healthy demand from investors, often leaving limited premium in new deals. The European high yield market enjoyed a brief revival with a healthy pipeline building up for April. Despite the lack of premium in the new issue market, the portfolio managers (PMs) selectively participated in a few deals across sectors where they believed there was value. The market was liquid and allowed the PMs to selectively perform switches in favour of more attractive bonds.

March enjoyed a broad base rally, with rate and credit indices posting positive returns. The US Treasury index was up by 0.6%, the UK gilt index was up by 1.8% and the Euro rates index was up by 1%. The supportive rates environment was naturally supportive for IG corporates; US IG was up by 1.2%, sterling IG was up by 1.9% and the European IG index was up by 1.2%. Strong risk sentiment led to strong return for the iBoxx Contingent Convertible (CoCo) Index, which was up by 2.2% on the month. US and European high yield indices enjoyed returns of 1.2% and 0.4% respectively.

The Fund returned 2.1% during the month. For sector contributions, the biggest contributors for the month were Additional Tier 1s (AT1s), followed by Collateralised Loan Obligations (CLOs). The detractors were European high yield, followed by hedging.

Market Outlook and Strategy

The market will remain focused on comments from central banks and economic data to assess the likely timing of upcoming rate cuts. The continuing strong economic data has increased the likelihood of cuts being delayed and rates staying higher for longer. The market will also turn its attention to the Q1 reporting season which will provide clues on the strength of the economy. In this context, the PMs will look to continue taking advantage of the current market conditions to do relative-value switches to try to enhance the portfolio, and expect to selectively remain active in the primary market.
