Fund Commentary | 30 June 2026

Market Commentary

- Government bonds rallied on the back of geopolitical relief, as easing inflation fears pulled yields lower.
- Credit spreads held steady despite AI-related equity volatility.
- Record investment grade (IG) supply was met with strong demand, underscoring the resilience of the technical backdrop.

Portfolio Commentary

- As priced-in rate hikes came to be viewed as an overreaction to a supply-driven inflation shock, the front-end recovered, driving positive performance across the subsectors.
- Having seen the resiliency of credit demand successfully tested once again and with strong underlying fundamentals, the managers felt confident to neutralise risk positions from their cautious basis.
- Allocations were made to attractive opportunities in investment grade corporates, hybrids, and financials.

Market Outlook and Strategy

- With the US-Iran Memorandum of Understanding (MoU) looking likely, if not certain, to lead to a lasting end to military hostilities, market focus has shifted to other risks.
- Central banks will remain a key driver – we expect Warsh to express hawkishness through Federal Reserve (Fed) balance-sheet reduction.
- The growing weight of AI-related issuance across credit markets is a developing theme. While demand remains robust, the managers are monitoring the blurring of sector boundaries and the scope for idiosyncratic stress as financing structures evolve.
