Fund Commentary | 29 August 2025

Market Commentary

- August's market moves were influenced by the US labour report at the beginning of the month, which saw payroll growth fall below expectations and significant downward revisions to the previous months' figures. The data left the three-month average payroll growth rate at its lowest level since the COVID-19 pandemic. In response, investors increased the probability of a September interest rate cut to 87% in the immediate aftermath of the release, up substantially from 40% before the report was published.
- A September rate cut was all but confirmed by Federal Reserve (Fed) Chairman Jerome Powell after he delivered a surprisingly dovish speech at the Jackson Hole central bankers' symposium towards the end of the month. The speech, which left the market increasingly confident of further near-term easing, highlighted that "downside risks to employment" are rising and that the "shifting balance of risks may warrant adjusting our policy stance". This suggests that a further weakening of the labour market is not necessary for monetary policy easing at this juncture.
- With the latest round of earnings picking up pace in August, issuers across both financials and corporates continued to display robust financials and strong fundamentals. The earnings season brought a limited number of downside surprises in the high yield and investment grade space, with issuers across a host of industries outperforming market expectations. This has contributed to a continuation in the strong technical backdrop and given the market confidence that developed economies will remain stable for some time yet.

Portfolio Commentary

- The portfolio managers kept the sector allocations broadly the same during the month, but were active in the secondary market to make changes within buckets. With new issuance subdued, the team looked to the secondary market to rotate into names with better relative value.
- The Fund was well positioned to navigate the market uncertainty, posting a positive total return again in August. There was a broadly even spread of positive performance across all sectors within the Fund. Buoyed by the increased likelihood of a near-term rate cut, US high yield corporates served as the biggest contributor to the Fund's performance. There were no detractors over the month.

Market Outlook and Strategy

- Investors' attention has again shifted to the labour market following August's jobs report, with the economy approaching a potential inflection point. It is widely anticipated that the Fed will cut rates again in September and that investors will receive updated projections from the central bank, which will help guide market expectations on how the remainder of the rate-cutting cycle will unfold. Primary market activity should rebound sharply in autumn, which will give the portfolio managers an opportunity to add new names or top up existing issuers.
- While there has, perhaps, been a return to volatility driven by doubts about macroeconomic stability, this uncertainty is met by solid fundamentals from credit issuers. Volatility creates tactical opportunities, but fundamentals remain key to long-term return generation. In this environment, with attractive yields on offer relative to history, disciplined carry strategies remain compelling.
